Just to give you some perspective....

Someone somewhere is saying that the FRTG DETERMINED that the flow increased after removing the top of the LMRP. The group did no such thing. We don't even have any data to make such an interpretation. There is REALLY BAD information that some irresponsible is putting out and it needs to be put straight. I don't think that the FRTG can even detect the 20% increase that the engineers think may be the upper bound on flow increase.
